Association for Women in Aviation Maintenance Introduces New President Laura Gordon

EDGEWATER, FL – Association for Women in Aviation Maintenance (AWAM) is proud to announce the unanimous election of their new President Ms. Laura Gordon. She comes to the position with a strong background in various areas of aviation technology, first as a line mechanic for Eastern Airlines, with an avionics specialty, then as a trainer with Flight Safety, and then a Director at Aviation Learning. Currently she is education director for Universal Technical Institute in Orlando. "When Laura was Vice President of AWAM, she instituted many new and innovative programs. I am proud of our new leader; she has both the organizational skills and the dynamic personality AWAM needs. She will be a spearhead for AWAM as we continue to grow," said outgoing president Robin Lamar. Ms. Lamar intends to remain active as AWAM Ambassador networking sponsors with new programs. Linda Sollars will replace Laura as the new AWAM Vice President. Linda is Safety Director at Jet Blue in New York, and a JetBlue pilot, as well as a certified Airframe and Powerplant Mechanic. The induction of new officers will take place at the AWAM Members Meeting at the Adams Mark Hotel in Dallas, on March 11, 2005.
